DECTOFACTS:

CATTLE TICK

Dectomax® Injectable provides superior control against all stages of cattle tick

Cattle tick represents a significant threat to animal health and production throughout the tick infested zones of Queensland, the Northern Territory and Kimberley region of Western Australia. Periodic outbreaks also occur in the tick free zones of these states as well as in northern New South Wales. This document outlines the key benefits of Dectomax Injectable for cattle tick control and eradication and for use in movement of cattle across the 'tick line'.

Changes to terminology

The cattle tick found in Australia, formerly referred to as Boophilus microplus, has recently been reclassified and is now referred to as Rhipicephalus australis. It will take some time for product labels to be updated to reflect this change of name and all product label claims that refer to Boophilus microplus also apply to Rhipicephalus australis.
